Award has special meaning...

Copies Overnight Cited For Digital Printing Excellence

Copies Overnight has been honored with first place in the Print On Demand Innovation Leadership Awards program.

President Steve Johnson received the award in the Business Case for Digital Print category last month in New York City.

Peer Group Acclaim

"We sincerely appreciate this special recognition for our leadership in digital printing," Steve says. "To win a prestigious award the first time we entered the national competition is particularly gratifying."

Big Benefits Offered

Our winning entry was a digitally produced 280-page adoption recruitment book. The purpose of the book is to place foster children in homes with adoption potential.

For decades, the book was printed via conventional offset with traditional lead times. Switching to a digital format offered significant benefits: faster turnaround, more frequent mailing opportunities, more targeted versions and more timely information.

Fully Digital Workflow

Inline addressing provided an even faster distribution alternative.

Faster turnaround time was also achieved by merging mailing data online with print files. Internet transmission of text files completed a fully digital workflow that proved to be superior to any other production method available.

Kids The Big Winners

"The award," Steve related, "has special meaning due to the humanitarian aspect of the project." The real success of the book can't be measured in dollars and cents. The bottom line is this: since the recruitment book was converted to digital technology, more foster children are being placed by the social service agency.

Our New Address

Don't forget we have a new address. Our new 14,000 sq. ft. plant is located one block west of our previous location at 262 Commonwealth Drive, Carol Stream, IL 60188.

Hospital Clean

"Our goal has always been to have the cleanest, most efficient plant in our industry," says production manager Chuck Legorreta. We believe this goal has been achieved. As one of our suppliers said, "This is a printing plant? It's so clean...it looks like a hospital."

Personal Tours

As we mentioned last month, we plan to have an open house later this year. But...we can give you a personally escorted tour of the facility now, if you're interested.

Just call, fax or send us an e-mail message and we'll set up a convenient time.

OS 8.6: A New Bug Killer

Apple has rolled out Mac OS 8.6 (an update of the 8.5.1 version we discussed in February). The version solves more 8.5 problems and offers some new features.

The upgrade is available free to 8.5 owners at:

www.apple.com/macOS

Of course, you'll find 8.6 has some bugs of its own. For details, point your web browser to this helpful website:

At his sister's wedding the little boy walked slowly down the aisle. Suddenly he paused, turned to his right, put his hands up like claws and snarled. Startled onlookers began to chuckle as the boy proceeded, repeating the fierce growl to his left, then again and again until the audience was reduced to tears of laughter.

The little boy, getting more and more embarrassed from all the laughing, was also near tears by the time he reached the pulpit.

"Darling, what's the matter?" his sister asked.

"It's not my fault," the boy whimpered. "You told me to be the Ring Bear!"

During Microsoft's antitrust trial, prosecutors called one of their head programmers to the witness stand. He arrived late—he crashed on the way to court.

A small social club was trying to organize a baseball team, but they could only muster up eight members.

Desperate, they turned to a new member, who was a very proper Brit, and asked the gentleman to join their team.

At his very first turn at bat, the Englishman surprised them all, hitting a ball out of the park.

"Run!" his teammates cried as their new member just stood there. "For Pete's sake, run!"

The Brit turned and glared at them icily. "I jolly well shan't run," he huffed. "I'm perfectly willing to buy you chaps another ball."

Happy Father's Day!

"There will be two buses leaving for the ballpark. The 2PM bus will be for those of you who need a little extra work. The empty bus will leave at 5PM."

The trouble with advice is you can't tell whether it's good or bad until you've taken it.

"Did you enjoy yourself?" the hostess asked George Bernard Shaw as he left the party.

"Yes, madam," he replied. "It was the only thing I did enjoy."

The minister, preoccupied with thoughts of how he was going raise money for badly needed church repairs, was further annoyed to find that the regular organist was sick and a substitute had been brought in at the last minute.

"The roof repairs cost twice as much as we expected, and we need $4,000 more," he reported during his sermon. "Any who can pledge $100 or more, please rise and commit yourself to the work of the church."

Just then the new organist played The Star-Spangled Banner. And that is how the substitute became the regular organist.

"They all laughed at Joan of Arc, but she went ahead anyway and built it."

"I hear the Wilsons are trying to learn French," a woman said to friends during lunch.

"They adopted a French baby," her friend replied. "They want to be able to understand him when he begins to talk."

"The biggest fish I ever caught," bragged an Australian, "was a four-foot cod."

"That's nothing," replied his Yankee friend. "I once caught a seven-foot bass."

The Aussie paused. "How did you measure your fish?"

"From head to tail, as usual," replied the Yank.

"Ah, that explains it," said the Aussie. "Down here we measure them between the eyes."
