Everyone Is in The Winner's Circle at Copresco

Copresco has won a Gold Ink Award for color printing of an artistic health-care marketing booklet.

Prestigious Honor

Presented by Printing Impressions magazine, the Gold Ink program is the industry's most prestigious print competition.

Impressive Presentation

Contest judges were impressed with the artistic use of full color bleeds and solid copy blocks with reversed type for the 11" x 8-1/2" booklet.

A handsome full-bleed cover printed in two tones of black features a two-color logo that commands the reader's attention.

The beautifully designed 28-page saddle bound piece was printed on a gloss paper stock to gain the rich reproduction of text and graphics.

Highest Standards

"The winning award entry reflects the high printing standards of our industry and shows the versatility of our digital printing services," says Copresco President Steve Johnson.

"You get a major winner when you combine the high quality of digital printing with the economy of short press runs.

"Copresco's production workflow for books, manuals and publications accommodates a wide range of sizes to meet demanding design requirements," Steve explained.

Major League Competition

According to Printing Impressions, thousands of Gold Ink Award entries are received each year from printers around the world who are looking to be recognized by their customers, prospects and industry peers for their superior craftsmanship.

A Shining Moment

Her use of sunlight shining on fallen apples in an orchard met contest requirements for an image that offers visual impact, interesting texture and unique composition.

Jessica is also responsible for much of the photography for Overnight Lite.
